Introduction

Why is accreditation important?

Our accreditation system is the backbone of a strong Alliance. It is how we guarantee standards and ensure a shared vision and values across the Alliance. Using assessment teams from peer organisations, we rigorously assess national organisations against the highest standards. At the Alliance, we want to build donors' confidence in the ability of our Linking Organisations (LOs) to deliver quality HIV programmes. We also want to ensure that the meaningful involvement of people with HIV and other marginalised groups, together with gender equality, are central to the work of all LOs.

A robust accreditation system provides a vital opportunity for LOs to learn from each other. Peer assessment teams identify areas where strengthening is needed to meet accreditation standards, feeding this into each organisation's capacity development plan. The Alliance is committed to upholding these principles, ensuring each organisation has a shared vision and values.

What is accreditation?

The Alliance accreditation system promotes good governance, accountability and good practice programming across our LOs. It guides the admission of new organisations and maintains standards for existing LOs. An accredited Alliance LO must meet our standards for good governance, organisational management, and good practice programming as assessed through a peer review process.

This guidance explains the accreditation assessment process and the evidence needed to verify compliance with each accreditation standard.

Meeting the standards

All Alliance LOs are required to meet 9 principles containing 38 accreditation standards. The standards cover three areas:

- governance and sustainability
- organisational management
- HIV programming.

In order to become an accredited member of the Alliance, an LO must meet all 38 standards. In addition, there are 7 programme-related HIV and health technical areas containing a further 28 standards. LOs are required to select two technical areas and meet all the standards each contain.

In these guidelines, each standard is expressed as a statement and is divided into a number of criteria (measurement indicators). Some of the criteria are essential and some desirable.

A standard is met by:

- achieving all essential criteria (these are highlighted with a shaded background)
- achieving the majority (50% or more) of criteria in a standard.

For each criterion, guidance and example questions are provided, together with references and links to documentation that may help the assessment team understand the requirements of the criteria. The evidence section lists documentation and activities that form the means of verification for each criterion (the LO is not required to have every relevant resource in order to meet criteria).

The accreditation process

A non-accredited Linking Organisation is an organisation that has not yet been accredited. If after two years since receiving the self-assessment tool the organisation has not achieved accreditation, the Linking Organisation will be reviewed.

Stage 1: Self-assessment

The first stage of the accreditation process is self-assessment. The LO assesses how well it meets the standards by using the accreditation self-assessment tool and guidelines and providing documentary evidence.

At this stage the LO also proposes two HIV technical areas based on their programming profile (see page 11 for all seven HIV technical areas). These technical areas are agreed in consultation with the LO, regional teams, the Best Practice Unit and the accreditation team, with final approval given by the accreditation committee.

Stage 2: Desk review

A team in the Alliance secretariat then reviews the self-assessment. Where standards are not yet met, an action plan is prepared by secretariat staff in conjunction with the LO to assist the LO to reach these standards. This stage should take between one and six months depending on the capacity development work outlined in the action plan.

Once the LO is confident it meets all standards, a field review visit is arranged.

Stage 3: Review visit

The Alliance accreditation system is peer led. The field review team consists of three members: two senior representatives from LOs (usually a board member and a senior staff member) and one senior staff member from the Alliance secretariat. The team members are chosen for their complementary skills and expertise in the three main areas covered by the accreditation standards: governance and sustainability, organisational management and HIV programming.

The varied and balanced experience of the field review team ensures that a constructive dialogue will occur when the team visits an LO. A relevant and deliverable further actions and recommendations is given to the LO.

The field review team conducts its review by gathering information from meetings and interviews with LO staff and external stakeholders. The team also requests documentation providing evidence that standards have been met.

The field review usually lasts three days. Once the review is complete, the review team makes a verbal report to the LO senior management and board and, if necessary, agrees further actions that need to be implemented to meet all standards. The review team also prepares a written report detailing the visit and any further actions required.

Stage 4: Follow-up action

The Alliance secretariat supports the LO to develop any final areas requiring improvement. Once the LO and secretariat are satisfied that these improvements have been achieved, a final report is prepared for submission to the accreditation committee.

Stage 5: Accreditation

The Alliance accreditation committee comprises Alliance secretariat trustees and representatives from LO boards and senior management. The committee is responsible for deciding whether an LO should be accredited, based on the reports from the field review team and secretariat staff. Once a LO adheres to the accreditation principles, the accreditation committee awards the accreditation certificate, which is valid for four years.

Where an LO has not been able to make required improvements over an agreed period of time to meet all standards, the accreditation committee may decide to suspend the LO.

The Accreditation committee reports all of its decisions to the Alliance secretariat board of trustees. An LO may appeal to the board of trustees against a decision of the accreditation committee.

An accredited Linking Organisation has demonstrated strong governance and organisational management. Its HIV programming is good practice programming - effective, targeted and human rights-based.

Accredited Alliance LOs are entitled to a wide range of benefits, all designed to keep them up to date with the latest programming, policy and fundraising news. Accredited LOs will be assessed every four years. However, within this time it is the responsibility of the LO to ensure that Alliance principles are adhered to.

For more information on Alliance accreditation, please refer to page 4 of the Alliance Charter and Linking Agreement.

A list of Alliance accredited LOs can be found on the Alliance website at <http://www.aidsalliance.org/search?q=Accreditation>

Efforts to prevent vertical transmission are commonly called prevention of mother-to-child transmission or prevention of parent-to-child transmission (PPTCT). PPTCT is preferable because it acknowledges the responsibility of both parents to reduce the risk of transmission and is less stigmatising to women.
